

Getting an X-Ray

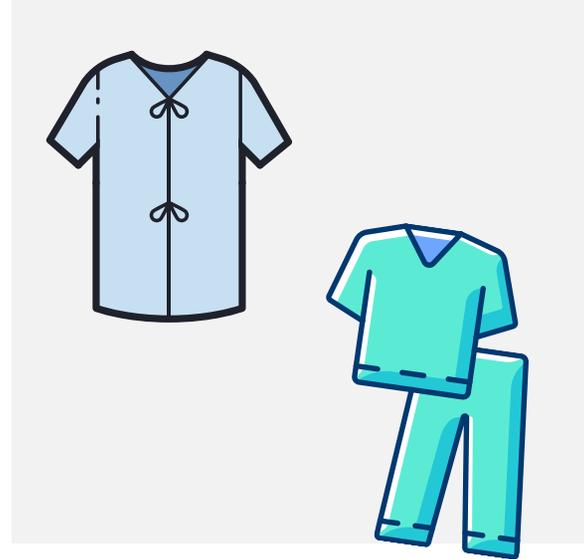

If I am not feeling well or in pain, my doctor might want to take X-rays of my body.

The X-ray machine is a big camera. It will take pictures of the inside of my body.

I may have to change into a gown or pajamas.

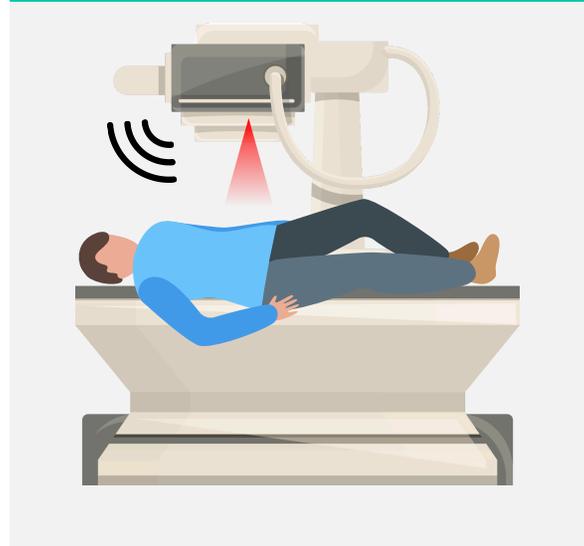

I might also have to wear a vest to protect my body. The vest might feel heavy, but it will not hurt.

I may need to lie down, sit, or stand up to take multiple pictures.

The X-ray machine might make noises and use lights to take the pictures.

Getting an X-Ray

This won't take long, but if I need a break, I can let the doctor know.

When we are done, the doctor will leave the room, and I can change back into my clothes.

A doctor will come talk to me about the results afterwards. They might also call me in a few days.
